DETAILED ACTION

Specification

1. The title of the invention is not descriptive. A new title is required that is clearly indicative of the invention to which the claims are directed.

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 102

2. The following is a quotation of the appropriate paragraphs of 35 U.S.C. 102 that form the basis for the rejections under this section made in this Office action:

A person shall be entitled to a patent unless –

(b) the invention was patented or described in a printed publication in this or a foreign country or in public use or on sale in this country, more than one year prior to the date of application for patent in the United States.

3. Claims 1-6 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 102(b) as being anticipated by Takimoto (U.S. Patent 5,966,496).

Regarding claim 1, Takimoto discloses a video recorder comprising: a source of a digital stream representing a video signal in one of a plurality of video standards; means for recording the digital stream on a medium as a recording among a plurality of recordings (col. 11, lines 61-63); means for recording an indicator of the video standard for the recording (col. 12, lines 8-11); means for detecting the video standard of the video signal thereby generating the indicator (Fig. 1; col. 3, lines 64-67).

Regarding claim 2, Takimoto discloses all the limitations as previously discussed with respect to claim 1 including that the recording means automatically starts a further recording when the detecting means detects a change in the video standard (Fig. 3 – displays every track has a subcode that identifies the track's video standard, which means that one track cannot have more than one kind of video standard recorded in it. Therefore, a new track is created when the video standard changes.).

Regarding claim 3, Takimoto discloses a process for recording a digital stream on a medium as a recording among a plurality of recordings, the digital stream representing a video signal in one of a plurality of video standards, with the steps of: detecting the video standard of the video signal (Fig. 1; col. 3, lines 64-67); recording an indicator of the video standard for the recording (col. 12, lines 8-11).

Regarding claim 4, Takimoto discloses all the limitations as previously discussed with respect to claim 3 including the steps of: detecting a change in the video standard of the video signal (the CPU detects the video standard); recording the digital stream as a further recording (Fig. 3 – displays every track has a subcode that identifies the track's video standard, which means that one track cannot have more than one kind of video standard recorded in it. Therefore, a new track is created when the video standard changes.).

Regarding claim 5, Takimoto discloses a process for recording a digital stream on a medium, the digital stream representing a video signal in one of a plurality of video standards, with the steps of: recording the digital stream as a first recording (col. 11, lines 61-63); detecting a change from a first video standard to a second video standard (the CPU detects the video standard); recording the digital stream as a second recording (Fig. 3 – displays every track has a subcode that identifies the track's video standard, which means that one track cannot have more than one kind of video standard recorded in it. Therefore, a new track is created when the video standard changes.).

Regarding claim 6, Takimoto discloses all the limitations as previously discussed with respect to claim 5 including the step of: recording an indicator of the second video standard for the second recording (Fig. 3; col. 12, lines 8-11 and 18-22 – displays every track has a subcode that identifies the track's video standard).

Conclusion

4. The prior art made of record and not relied upon is considered pertinent to applicant's disclosure.
 - a. Lim et al. (U.S. Patent 6,269,218) discloses a reproduction apparatus that reads the information in the sequence header which exists in a first end of each track whenever a track is changed in order to determine if the track consists of PAL or NTSC bit streams.
